

... whose trunk you can see here, I used my small digital camera to capture one last photo – a cool close-up!

WOOOsshhhh

A minute or so later, the show was over. As they headed up the street, and beyond, one by one the trucks would get filled up and then head off to unload their cargo of snow at a dump site... in or outside the city; every year we wonder, where does the snow go?

Sunday morning became tranquil again.

Although people with cars probably appreciate that the snow was removed, I was a little bit sad to see it taken
